stampitaal en acceptatie. Overal staat het Prominent U.S. musician Josh Groban is on a self-imposed exile from the country after he expressed his discontent with the U.S.'s treatment of immigrants through an open letter. "America is by far the greatest country in the world. And I love it," Groban writes in the letter.

"But I just can't love it anymore." According to Groban's Facebook post, the musician decided he "just needed to tell the truth" about his departure from the country after anti-immigration demonstrators protesting an Oregon rally against the Trump administration's zero tolerance policy that separated migrant children from their families. "As a person of immigrant heritage and as a citizen of the United States, my voice matters. The immigration policies and border wall are an affront to human dignity." "I can't accept it any longer," Groban said. "The way the country has been treating its immigrant population [is] just so overwhelming to me that it's too much to bear." Groban is a Filipino American who has been living in the U.S. for five years after graduating high school in Boston. "So I'm taking a break. I'm trying to remain optimistic," he said. "But really it's just too much." Some of the musician's fans reported he is gone from the U.S. The musician posted a picture of himself boarding a plane, saying, "This is my fifth goodbye." Groban's wife, Ariana Teixeira, also commented on the photo, saying, "Farewell is a strong word... but I 50b96ab0b6
